'Sawyer Brown' to make repeat appearance

Melissa Chaffin
Copy editor

The success of last year's Sawyer Brown concert encouraged the Memorial Union Activities Board to book them at Fort Hays State once again.

Last October, the band rounded out the Homecoming weekend activities with a Sunday evening performance.

This year, the country band will perform at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 11 at the Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Sawyer Brown recently released a new album, "Cafe on the Corner," and the title song of that album is ranked No. 25 on the charts and climbing. I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said students said they wanted to see the group return.

"They were here last year, and people really liked it," Dent said.

Lesley Morisse, Zenda senior, went to last year's Sawyer Brown concert and said she will probably go again this year.

"They put on an awesome concert ... a really good show," Morisse said.

Although the main act features the same band, Dent said this year the concert will be "spiced up" by the opening act, Chris LaDoux. LaDoux's single, "Whatcha Gonna

Do With a Cowboy," is currently No. 9 on the charts. LaDoux has previously performed he expects this year's crowd to be at least that size. Tickets for the October performance at Murphy's, East Hwy 40,

Dent said last year's concert attendance reached more than 2,300, and go on sale tomorrow.

Ticket prices will be $15.50 for FHSU students and $17.50 for the general public.

In order for FHSU students to buy their tickets at the student discount price, Dent said they must purchase them before the day of the show from the Student Service Center only.

Dent said students will not be able to purchase tickets at the discount price at the door.

Those interested in obtaining front row seats should contact the student service for more information, Dent said.

To obtain tickets, those interested must report to the Student Service Center at 9 a.m. tomorrow, to receive a number. The numbered cards will be given out in order of first-come, first serve until 11:30 a.m.

Students with these numbers will then return to the Union at 1 p.m. and line up outside the Pioneer Lounge in numerical order. Students without numbers will line up at the back.

At 1:30 p.m., the doors will open and everyone holding a numbered card, plus one guest, will be allowed to buy up to 20 tickets.

Tickets will also be available at Murphy's and G-B Records, Tapes, and Compact Discs, 106 W. Ninth.

The concert should last approximately two and a half hours.

Seminar attacks serious subject

Many people perceive rape as having to do with strangers. However, most rapes that occur are known as acquaintance rape.

The Non Traditional Student Organization sponsored a seminar focusing on date rape last night.

The guest speakers were Rose Arnhold, associate professor of sociology, and University Police Sgt. Ed Howell.

Arnhold was the first to speak and addressed the issue of rape between two individuals who know each other.

Arnhold said a theory on why rapes occur is due to miscommunication.

"Males and females tend to see behaviors in a very different light and tend to interpret behaviors differently which leads to automatic confusion," Arnhold said.

She said small gestures are interpreted to men as being sexual advances and to a woman it is a sign of concern or friendship.

Arnhold said, "We need to teach males how females think about (signals) and teach females how males think."

She said the major miscommunication is with the word "no." Arnhold said men think that when a woman says "no," she is being reluctant and really means "yes."

One message, Arnhold said, that I think will be apparently clear is that "no" means "no."

Even when rape does occur the victims do not always report the incident. She said the assaulted person feels guilty.

A lot of people who are willing to admit rape occurs are very reluctant to admit acquaintance rape happened," Arnhold said.

After Arnhold's presentation, Howell presented statistics from the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and other information on rape.

He said 85 percent of all rapes are acquaintance rape. In the year 1990, there were 1,002 rapes reported. This was a 12 percent increase from the year before.

Howell gave some of the most common times and places rapes occur and the type of victim and assailant.

He said the victim is usually a white female between the ages 15 through 19, while the assailant is typically a white male between the ages of 20 through 24.

Howell said they came to the conclusion that acquaintance rape was the most common because the location for 630 of the rapes out of 1,002 took place in either apartments or places of residence.

Howell said rape is defined as sexual intercourse with any person who does not give their consent. This also includes being under the influence of alcohol or other drugs.

He said when rape is reported to the law enforcement or when victims go to the hospitals for tests for sexually transmitted diseases the State of Kansas will pay for all the medical and psychological services that the victim needs if the rape was reported within 48 hours of the incident.

The law enforcement is required to ask victims questions, which are sometimes personal and can be taken the wrong way, Howell said.

He said when victims are questioned they are usually in an irrational state and are so devastated, the law enforcement officials "try to be as compassionate as possible."

Date rape reported

Anne Zohner
Managing editor

A date rape which occurred on campus during the early morning hours of Aug. 28 is still in the investigative stages.

According to Sid Carlile, University chief of police, the incident occurred underneath Jellison Bridge and the victim knew her attacker.

"It was an acquaintance-type situation," Carlile said.

The University Police would not comment on any questions which might reveal the victim's identity.

"For the protection of the victim, we want to extend every consideration possible to keeping her identity confidential," University Police Sgt. Ed Howell said.

"It was reported to us some time around the third or fourth or seventh of September," Howell said.

"We know it must have been hard to come forward, but now that it has been reported, we want to insure (the victim's) safety."

The investigative process is being headed by Howell, who said he hopes to have the investigation finished before long.

"We're still trying to find potential witnesses and hope to have it finished by the end of the week," Howell said.

After the University police have completed their investigation, the report will be submitted to the county attorney for review.

The county attorney was not available for comment at press time.

After that point, it is up to the victim to decide how she wants to proceed with the legalities, Howell said.

The Aug. 28 incident is the only date rape that has been reported this semester.

"This is the only one known about at this point," Carlile said.

Both officers said they believe the issue of date rape is an important matter and encouraged students to become informed through rape seminars.

"We need to get the information across to the students," Howell said. "There are a lot of statistics that would really shock some people."

Debates do nothing

Of what importance is a presidential debate? What does the American public really learn from these debates? Very little.

In 1960, John Kennedy defeated Richard Nixon in the first televised debate because, unlike Nixon, he did not sweat like a pig underneath the lights of the television set.

Nixon learned the importance of stage make-up after this fiasco, but nothing else of much importance came out of the debate.

In 1988, the voting public was shocked to find out that Lloyd Bentsen did not think Dan Quayle was JFK.

It was also learned that Mike Dukakis could not come up with a quick answer to a reporter's question about what he would do if his wife were raped. Like any normal human can answer that question in an allotted amount of time.

What does this have to do with a person's qualifications to be president?

Nothing. What voters do find out, however, is who will win a beauty contest and who can come up with the best insult of their opponent.

So, what will debates between Bush and Clinton be like?

Both candidates will argue over who is most like Harry Truman and some reporter will ask a pathetic question about family values.

Who will win?

Clinton's better looking, but Bush has more experience with soundbites.

Just call it a draw and get on with real issues. They most likely will not be discussed anyhow.

Individual separate from society

To be an individual or to conform with society norms?

What a stupid question. This is a stupid question since one is hardly related to the other.

So many people often speak of one's identity in terms of whether one acts alone (individual) or acts strictly in line with what society demands (society). Thus, the struggle of individual vs. society rages on.

To understand the differences between the two, one must first define the two terms.

Webster defines individual as "distinguished from others by special characteristics; of a unique or striking character."

Webster defines society as "all people, collectively, regarded as constituting a community of related, interdependent persons."

By definition, to act as an individual simply means to have qualities and, most importantly, thoughts which may differ from others.

Rebecca Lofton
Staff writer

It does not imply that one must go out and purposely deviate from what has come to be considered normal by most.

On the other hand, by definition, to accept societal norms does not mean that one must not think nor act on any ideals that might differ from what society has deemed normal.

The term merely attributes that certain standards have been erected that we might all live together in relative peace. Peace will never be ascertained until the ideas behind the words "individual" and "society" are cleared up.

Yes, all must live under the rule of certain standards so that everyone might get along a little better.

This does not mean that one's identity must be crushed.

There is no need to feel that society is all-knowing; that its standards are there to keep our own ideals stagnant.

There is no rule against questioning nor against proclaiming your own views.

Individualism comes from inside. It comes from one's thoughts, ideas and imagination.

There is no need to rebel against societal norms, because, as of yet, society has not demanded that all persons terminate their thoughts and feelings.

And so my challenge to all is to become an individual inside. That is where one's identity is born anyway. Continue to visualize.

Bernard Shaw once said, "I have a friend and he is a Jew and his name is Albert Einstein."

Forget these ideas that prejudice must exist, that war is necessary, that drinking is a must have for a good time.

Decide for yourself and don't worry whether your thoughts are right, for only you can say. The power of individual emotion and spirit is something that can not be killed. It rages within each of us.

In Shakespeare's play "King Lear," it is written, "Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say." This is vital.

I'm not calling for an anarchy here, I just want to see some opinion. Each person's ideas make up who that person is. If you just go along with everything that is handed you without any question, then your soul is dead.

In Ayn Rand's "The Fountainhead," the main character, Howard Roark, spoke and held true to his personal ideals. And so it is written of him.

"Then there was only the ocean and the sky and the figure of Howard Roark."

This feeling of elation can only come from within.

Letters to the editor

Senate needs unification

Dear editor:

In its recent article devoted primarily to President Hammond's discussion of changes to Fort Hays State, the Leader also reported inaccurately a motion which I made in the Academic Senate.

As reported, the motion seems to support existing parking policy.

The opposite is true; the Academic Senate was given a report by Senator Gary Gilmore of the Classified Senate reporting that FHSU has been construing parking policy as requiring each employee to buy a parking permit unique to that employee.

Any guess, even in a car covered by the permit, by anyone else was treated as a parking violation.

The Classified Senate had objected to this absurd policy; my motion, passed unanimously, put the Academic Senate on record as supporting the stance of the Classified Senate.

The situation in question is an example of the even greater absurdity of multiple senates on this campus. I am unable to see why we should not have one senate for all members of the University community. The present compartmentalization into many senates and even more committees tends to render each powerless and meaningless.

It also discourages participation in all of these bodies (the only reason I serve in the Academic Senate is that all the other members of my tiny department were smarter than I at figuring out excuses not to serve.)

It is time to treat all members of the University community as equals and to establish one serious, effective senate which includes everyone.

The mechanics of this are not entirely clear to me; I suppose that the faculty will insist on having a disproportionate share of votes — after all, surely a doctorate makes one superior to one's fellow human beings.

But with good will and courage we can surely work out an equitable and representative arrangement whose effectiveness will greatly enhance the University.

I hope that my remark about doctorates will not be misconstrued, but I fear that the humorless among us will misunderstand.

To make myself perfectly clear: a doctoral degree is a certificate that the holder possesses certain research skills within a fairly broad range of academic studies.

It in no way confers moral or any other form of superiority on its holder.

I cannot refrain from pointing out that the Academic Senate begins each session by a roll-call procedure (unknown at other universities) which makes the invidious comparison of calling some members "Doctor" while others are addressed as "Mr.", "Mrs.", or "Miss".

Since all members have the same vote, the only correct title must be "Senator," but I have no doubt that those who worship the doctoral idol will be offended at the suggestion.

The event will begin at 11:30 a.m. Friday, Sept. 25 in the quad area.

Interns play part in 1992 senatorial election

Crystal Holdren
Senior copy editor

Eight Fort Hays State students have been given an opportunity this semester which only happens once every six years.

These students have been chosen to be interns until the November election for Sen. Bob Dole's (R-Kan.) campaign staff.

All of the interns are either political science majors or are minors in the field.

Jeff Seibel, deputy political director of the regional western Kansas office, said the interns were chosen through the political science department as volunteers to help in the Hays office (2703 Hall St.).

Seibel said he was given the names of prospective interns from Arthur Morin, assistant professor of political science. He is also the advisor for the internship.

Morin said he suggested these students because they are ones who work hard and who he felt was interested in the Republican party, and it was something they would enjoy doing.

The interns have been organizing regional meetings throughout the first district which consists of 66 counties, Seibel said.

"We are like a youth organization because in politics right now a big push is that the youth aren't as involved, so (the campaign) is looking at it from a younger perspective," Hansen said.

The other major task the interns have been working on is starting the Young Collegiate Republicans in the community colleges which are in the first district.

Hansen said each intern is assigned to a specific college and they are in charge of contacting students who are interested in starting the organization.

Denny said by talking to other students at different schools they hope to get more of the younger people interested in the Dole campaign.

"Everyone complains about our generation not doing enough, being active enough, and so we are trying to change that because the Senator is concerned about that," Norbury said.

Krannawitter said he thought that by just talking to other students it gets them involved in the political process.

The interns had different reasons for wanting to be a Dole intern such as family members who have been involved in the past.

"I'm a third generation Dole supporter in my family. My grandmother worked on his first campaign for senate, my mother worked for him when he was running for President, and now I'm working for him," Hansen said.

Scheck said, "My family has always been interested in politics and my mother works for Bob Dole and I was also interested."

Another reason was some of the interns believed in the platform which Dole represents.

"I've always been a staunch supporter of Bob Dole. I've always liked the stance he's taken on a lot of the issues, for example his co-supporting the education 2000 and his stance on foreign affairs," Denny said.

Norbury said, "I want to support a person who will voice my needs and those of the citizens of Kansas."

Other interns felt this was an opportunity which only comes along once.

"(Working for Dole) is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. You can't pass it up," Bale said.

Ryan said, "This was a trial run for me to see if it was something I'd like to get into. It was the only opportunity I had to work with a politician this far."

Seibel said the internship will be over after the November election, but they will spend time collecting data and winding up the office before the internship is officially over.

He said the office has all the interns it can use right now, but if any students want to work as a volunteer for Dole they can contact him at 625-9292.

Encore series opens tomorrow night

Tracy Whitlock
Copy editor

Wednesday night is the first performance of this season's Encore Series. Marimba Nandayapa will play at 8 p.m. in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center.

Marimba Nandayapa has played with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, London, and at the Mexico Exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum. They have more than 50 recordings of classical music, Mexican folk songs and international music.

Webster's Dictionary defines marimba as "a musical instrument consisting of a set of graduated wooden bars, often with resonators beneath to reinforce the sound, struck with mallets."

"The purpose (of the Encore Series) is to bring in entertainers and performers and also to play the role of the educational institution," I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said.

Dent said many people have never even heard of the marimba, and students will probably never have the chance to hear it for less money.

"We try to bring in the familiar and definitely the unfamiliar," Dent said. "Part of the fun of college is to get turned on to new and different things."

"You might just come away a marimba addict."

Tickets for the performance are $1 unreserved and $5 reserved for students. They are $3 and $5 for faculty and staff and $5 and $9 for the general public.

Dent said that season tickets for the entire series are still available and are $15 unreserved and $25 reserved for students. He said students should think about purchasing these since they are much cheaper.

Also coming up at Beach/Schmidt is the jazz piano concert of Ellis Marsalis and Marcus Roberts. They will be performing at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Dent said they use two concert grand Steinways to play improvisational jazz, solo and dual.

Marsalis is a leading jazz pianist and music educator from New Orleans.

"This is going to be a terrific concert," Dent said. "One (Marsalis) is a legend, and the other (Roberts) is going to be a legend."

Tickets are $7 for students, $9 for faculty/staff and $11 for the general public. They are available at the Student Service Center and at the door.

Football team fumbles its record to 0-3

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

"We had several chances, but we let another one get away."
That is what Tiger Head Coach Bob Cortese said about last Saturday night's 21-14 loss at the hands of the University of Central Arkansas Bears. Cortese said that little mistakes were again the culprit in the Tigers' third loss.

"You can't make mistakes like we did and expect to beat teams that play the caliber of football that UCA plays," Cortese said.
The mistakes Cortese was referring to, included a Bear interception at the Tiger 36-yard line and a fumbled punt snap that gave the Bears the ball at the Tiger 20-yard line.
Following the interception, the Bears scored their second touchdown of the day when sophomore tailback Erron Bobo scattered in from 17 yards out. The Bears missed their first 2-point conversion opportunity but were given a second chance when the Tigers were called for having 12 men on the field. BoBo pushed the ball in and the game was knotted 14-14.

On the second play after the fumbled snap, Bear sophomore quarterback Ken Collums tossed a 21-yard touchdown pass to junior end Tyree Davis that gave the Bears the victory.
Tiger freshman quarterback Dustin McEwen said he believes the team is better than its record reflects.
"If you take away a couple of mistakes in each game, we could just as easily be 2-1 or 3-0," McEwen said. "If I didn't throw that interception or if we didn't have that bad snap, we beat

"Besides Mesa State we have the toughest non-league schedule."

Bob Cortese, FHSU head football coach

the NAIA (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) national champs."
The Tigers are using the pre-Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference to work on problems they have in their game. "We have faced three tough defenses," Cortese said. "(Freshman)

Clint Bedore is running better because he is getting the ball a lot. McEwen has a few games under his belt, and he knows our system better. The more we play, the better our whole game will get."
Although Cortese said he has a hard time seeing anything good in an 0-3 start, he said he thinks the level of competition the Tigers have faced will prepare them for their RMAC schedule.

"Besides Mesa State, we have the toughest non-league schedule," Cortese said. "Some of the RMAC teams aren't even playing NCAA (National Collegiate Athletics Association) teams. I read in the paper that a couple of RMAC teams played Western Montana and Montana Tech. Those are NAIA division II teams. By playing tougher competition, we put ourselves in a position to be better prepared to win the RMAC."

Tigers take fourth place on the road

Amy Story
Sports editor

The Fort Hays State cross country team traveled to Pueblo and Colby last Saturday.
In the Southern Colorado Invitational at Pueblo the men's and women's squad placed fourth overall out of eleven teams.
Adams State took first in the men's race with Colorado State following by one point. Third place was won by Colorado University with a total score of 68. FHSU came in at fourth with a score of 131.
The women's team was defeated by CSU with a score of 23, ASU with a score of 64, and CU with a score of

"I was real proud of the way we packed. Now I'd like to move the pack up by about one and a half to two minutes."

Jim Krob, FHSU cross country coach

92. FHSU trailed with a score of 139.
Jim Krob, FHSU cross country coach said before his team left for Pueblo that times were not going to be important because the altitude would affect the runners, and it did.
Sonya Pohlman, sophomore, dehydrated on the course.
"It wasn't a good race for me," Pohlman said.
Krob said she was "out on her feet."

and she had been sick the week before which contributed to her dehydration.
"She turned white as a sheet. She had some physical problems and she couldn't stand up by herself," Krob said.
Another runner who had trouble in Colorado was Greg Carey, senior.
"His knee just killed him this weekend," Krob said. "The course was rocky and bumpy and irritated his knee."

Carey's knee was injured before the season in a car accident.
Krob said the squads ran more as a team in this match.
"I was real proud of the way we packed," Krob said. "Now I'd like to move the pack up by about one and a half to two minutes."
"We ran so much better than we did last year," Krob said.

Southern Colorado Invitational with 69 runners competing in the 5-mile men's race: Jesse Schreuder, junior, finishing 21st with a time of 28:01; Nacho Velazquez, junior, finishing 25th with a time of 28:21; Mark Pohlman, junior, finishing 27th with a time of 28:28; Kevin Zimmer, sophomore, finishing 32nd with a time of 28:44; Scott Michael, sophomore, finishing 34th with a time of 28:53; and Greg Carey, senior, finishing 42nd with a time of 29:21.

The women's leader was Krista Adams finishing 12th with a time of 19:49 in the women's Southern Colorado Invitational on a 3.1-mile course with a large field of 80 runners.
Also running in Pueblo for the FHSU women were: Summer Vann, freshman, finishing 24th with a time of 20:28; Marla Cook, junior, finishing 33rd with a time of 21:03; Bobbi Stalter, senior, finishing 36th with a time of 21:09; Jenni Denton, sophomore, finishing 37th with a time of 21:12; Sonya Pohlman, sophomore, finishing 38th with a time of 21:19; and Diann Schwartzkopf, sophomore, finishing 44th with a time of 21:38.

The underclassmen traveled to Colby Community College with a full men's team placing first. FHSU did not take enough women to compete as a team in the Colby meet the men's leader from FHSU was Robert Hamrick, freshman, finishing fifth out of 31 runners with a time of 23:05. He was followed by Mike Leiker, sophomore, finishing 10th with a time of 24:21.
Also running at Colby were Lee Blevins, freshman, finishing 11th with a time of 24:52; Brad Cure, junior, finishing 13th with a time of 24:09; Ward Willis, sophomore, finishing 15th with a time of 24:24; Jason Fawver, junior, finishing 17th with a time of 24:29 and Greg Younger, senior, finishing 27th with a time of 26:59.
The two women running at Colby were Nicole Gerbill, freshman, who finished 10th out of 14 with a time of 22:42 and Jennifer Carter, sophomore, who finished 12th with a time of 24:27.

Athletic association meets

Bob Gilmore
Editor in chief

The Fort Hays State Athletic Association discussed the possibility of drug testing of student athletes in the future at its first meeting of the school year yesterday.

Tom Spicer, FHSU athletic director, said the National Collegiate Athletic Association does not mandate drug testing at the division II level, but they may in the future.

"It's mandatory at the division I level. It is a trickle-down situation from the standpoint they have not made it mandatory in division II at this point, but it is going to be mandatory at some national championships.

"Our feeling in our conference as well as our institution at this point is to do a very good job at education, which we do the first week-and-a-half students come on campus.

"The thing that we are concerned with is not necessarily that we have a major issue with misuse of a substance, but that we need to recognize that it is an issue in our society and that we do have it on our campus," Spicer said.

Spicer said since the athletic department already has an educational program it needs to begin considering if a testing program needs to be implemented.

"If we choose to go into a drug testing program what we need to do is come up with a process of random selection, because we have at this point in our program 400 students in our athletic program, which is an increase of about 70 students over last year," he said, adding that the number of students in the department means it would have to randomly test athletes because of the cost.

Spicer said it would cost $28 to test each athlete for the six most common street drugs and $100 to test for steroids.

He said he does not believe any major drug problems exist, but the athletic department has cautioned athletes about fliers that have been sent to some athletes.

"We've got some fliers going around right now that we're telling our kids to shy away from," he said.

Spicer said the fliers have come from Canada, Florida and California and are legal. Most of the performance-enhancers sold by the companies also are not against NCAA regulations, but he said his department stresses the possibility of health problems to athletes if they are taken.

In other business, Spicer said the athletic department was in need of vehicles.

"We have four vehicles in review with our maintenance people. They told us it would be best if we did not put them back on the road from the liability standpoint ...," he said.

Spicer said a line item needs to be put into the budget for new vehicles.

In the future he said he would like to begin leasing vehicles instead of buying because of the cost of maintaining vehicles.

Going the distance

Mark and Sonya Pohlman dedicate themselves to their love of distance running

Amy Story
Sports editor

Mark and Sonya Pohlman both run on the Fort Hays State cross country team. That is no secret. But what a lot of people do not know is that they are also brother and sister. Ask them and they will say there is nothing special about them, but there is something special about them.

They work together.
"You have to train everyday, so we support each other," Mark said.
"We have each other telling us we have to do it," Sonya said. "On days we don't want to run we push each other."

"There's a lot of days we don't want to run, but we've got to do it," Mark said.
Their coach, Jim Krob, said they are both dedicated runners.

"Both of them are very dedicated runners. No doubt about that," Krob said.

And they are dedicated.
"Whether it's cold or rainy, we've just got to do it," Mark said.

They run six days a week, no matter what the weather is like.

Sonya said she likes the summer and the heat. "I like it hot," Sonya said.

They rarely run together because their schedules conflict so much Sonya said, especially in the summer.

"I usually get up and run in the morning and he usually runs after he gets off of work," Sonya said.

Just like the summer finds their schedules divided, so does the winter, but she and her brother do not stop when the snow comes around. Mark said he has ran through all kinds of bad weather.

"One Christmas it was forty below, windchill, and I ran. It was cold," Mark said. "I had on one of those face masks and I was all bundled up like this," he waves his hand outward from his mid-section. "Man it was cold."

Their dedication does not just bridge the weather barrier. They run six days a week in practice and on Sunday if they want to and they usually do, Krob said.

"Mark is running 70 miles plus a week and Sonya is running 45 miles plus a week," Krob said.

Their family supports them in their dedication to the sport they both love.

"In high school they came to every meet," Sonya said. "But last year I was running here and my brother was running at Barton so they had to choose."

"They try to go to most of our meets," Mark said, "but they don't go too far."

These two are not the only ones in their family that love to run. They have two sisters that run also.

"Vickie and her husband are both really into it," Sonya said. "They go all over the place and compete."

Their other sister likes to run too Mark said, but she does not run competitively.

They do have one brother, Alan, that does not run.

"That makes five of us, and four of us run," Sonya said, with a smile.

Their dedication comes from their love to run.

"It's different," Sonya said. "You're on your own and you've got competition. You do it for yourself."

"Why did they start running?" Mark could not sit still long enough not to.

"I guess I wasn't really a football player and I needed something to do so I went out for cross country," Mark said.

Mark is exploding with energy. Just within the time the interview took place, he was tapping his feet, drumming his fingers on the chair making a thumping sound, wiggling his legs back and forth, dancing his feet, grabbing his hands and at one point he just abruptly stood up.

"He's a real hyper person," Krob said. "Distance running is his outlet."

Sonya's reason for starting was a little bit different.

"It was my sophomore year in high school and my brother was in cross country. When I became a sophomore they were all trying to get me to go out for cross country."

"Sonya's not real fast on the track," Krob said. "She gets her success from work."

Sonya admits that she is not fast and said her brother would beat her in a sprint.

"Neither of us have much speed, but he has more speed than I do," Sonya said.

"A lot of it comes down to the end of the race, how much sprint you have left," Sonya said.

Both Pohlmans on the FHSC cross country team are filled with dedication and a true love for their sport.

"Running will always be a part of my life," Sonya said.

Mark just looked at her and said "Yeah."
